Donas Manufactory in Parls. Mr. Dwight writes from Parls to the Journal of Music, the following account of a na donne manufactory: I witnessed for one hour the competition in Grand Opera. Entering the broad courtin Grand Opera. Entering the broad courtyard of the Conservatoire, at every door of which, at all public entrances, a soldier stood on guard, the ear was at once saluted by a Babel of loud sounds from cornets, trombones, clarionets, &c., from earnest students in the different wings. It reminded one of the description in Charles Anchester, of his ideal musical nursery and bee-hive somewhere in Germany. Finding the entrance to the Salle or Theater, I sought in vain for seat or standing place save in the highest corridors, outside, where one could only hear, not see. The hearing of a succession of well-worn arise and trios from La well-worn arias and trios from La everita, Il Trocatore, and the like, sung by rangers of whom you could not even learn the names, was not so much the point of enriosity; to see the place, the people and the way they manage things, was much more to our purpose.

Wearied with the perpetual response of i n'y a pas de place (not a single seat) from the ancient goddesses who sat and watched at every entrance, I lingered awhile in the corridor surrounding the first tier of boxes, when spying a door ajar, I silently pulled it open, and, stepping in behind its occupants, commanded a fell view of the hardern commanded a full view of the handsome lit the theater. It was a lively scene; parterra and circles were densely packed with the beauty and the fashion of la belle France. On stage, in costume, sang a succession of debutants, mostly in well-known tries for soprano, tenor, and base or baritone. We iced two or three remarkably fine voices while the method, vocalization and ex-pression of the most spoke quite well for their training and their own ambition, and the dramatic action seldom lacked abandon or correct conception. A piano-forte was the only accompaniment. only accompaniment.

Opposite the stage sat the judges, some eight or ten in number; and a goodly collection it was of fine looking, intellectual heads. Among them you saw Auber (now Director-in-Chief of the Conservatoire), Halevy, Ambroise, Thomas, Pauseron, and younger magnates of the monde musicals of Paris. But the vivacious aspect of the audience, the eager interest, the intense enthusiasm, the murmurs of delight when a good point was made, the insatiable rounds of ap-plause after each happy debut—that was in-deed a sight to see, and feel, too, for the mo-ment. It was thoroughly French. And there were anxious faces, also; we met them in the corridors, as blushing and excited maidens, whose turns were just come or just past, came rushing round to seek the comfort or congratulation of their friends.

OPPORTUNITY FOR A SENSATION—A New Star in the Dramatic Firmament.—It is an-nounced in Boston that the debut of an interesting and highly accomplished lady will be made at the Howard Athenseum in that city in a few days. Gertrude Argyle is des-tined to adorn the profession she is about to enter and to become one of its most brilliant stars. Gifted with extraordinary beauty and genius, and intellectual powers cultivated to the highest degree by assiduous study, she brings to the drama qualities essential to success rarely combined and more rarely developed in the profession to which she has determined to devote her energies and talents. She needs only opportunity to be to America what Rachel is to France or Ristori to Italy. Avoiding the threadbare routine whose constant reproduction has done more stars. Gifted with extraordinary beauty and whose constant reproduction has done more than all else to destroy the popularity of the legitimate drama, her repertoire will be the legitimate drama, her repertoire will be filled almost entirely with new plays which she will make exclusively her own, and to whose excellence her exquisite literary taste has greatly added.

Mr. Bewley, who was hung in Texas by a pro-slavery mob a short time since, on suspicion of Abolitionism, the Albany Journal says, will be remembered by many who attended the General Conference at Buffalo last May. He represented the Arkansas Conference, and was recognized as a peaceful, humble and devoted Evangelist. His views of slavery were of the mildest character, and he would be deemed the last man to thrust his views offensively—mild and conservative though they were— -mild and conservative though they were upon any community.

On his removal to Texas a few months since, he carried with him testimonials of his humility and devotion to his work. But he was a Methodist—that, in Texas, is deemed the equivalent of Abolitionism; and the de-voted minister of Christ, guilty of no crime, and on the merest suspicion that he cher-ished offensive opinions, was hung up like a murderer.

Twenty-four Souls Perish-Loss $336,-000-Total Damage Over $1,000,000.

The Mobile (Ala.) papers of the 19th, furnish the following particulars of the loss of the ship Robert H. Dixey:

The saddest record of the storm, as far as Robert H. Dizzy, with her esteemed and popular captain, and eighteen of her crew. The ship anchored, on Friday evening, inside the outer bar, near the west shoal, where she went ashore about ten o'clock Friday night. The pilot, Mr. Smyly, who has come out as a passenger from New York, urged Captain Dixey to save himself on the topgallant forecastle, which he saw was about to go down, but the captain had lashed himself to the rigging and refused to leave his ship. The pilot with the second mate and fourmen escaped to the shore when the ship. broke up, and were rescued by Captain Mscoduck, of the ship American Union, who was anchored near, and sent a boat for built at Boston in 1855, owned in part by the captain, but chiefly in Mobile. She was valued at $36,000, and was insured in Northern offices. Her cargo was very valuable—we have beard it estimated as high as $300,-000, some $28,000 of which was insured here, the rest probably in great part at the North.

Capt. Richard W. Dixey, the late commander of the unfortunate ship, was well known in Mobile, being a regular trader to this city, and was highly respected wherever known. As a sailor, he bore a high reputa-tion, having encountered several severe gales under circumstances which elicited high commendation in Liverpool, Philadelphia and elsewhere. He was remarkable as a successful but mild disciplinaring, and was not unfrequently styled "the Christian Captain." His last words to the pilot were "Good-bye, I hope we shall meet in Heaven." At the time of his death he was about fifty-one

The total loss is now estimated at near $1,000,000. It was certainly far more destructive than the noted one of 1852, notwithstanding its duration was for a shorter period than at that time. period than at that time.

LAND.—A curious cave has recently been discovered in a limestone quarry in Scotland; the entrance was laid open by the quarrymen, who had cut away the rock. It is of large size, though it has been explored only for the distance of forty or fifty yards; the sides and roof are thickly covered with stalactites, which have assumed a variety of fantastic shopes, some remarkable for their mainstic surpes, some remarkable for their grace and beauty, while others astonish by their close resemblance to well-known objects. Just inside the entrance, one projects from the side in the form of a small human skull, another bears an exact semblance to a horse's jaw-bone, while a little further on one is struck by the appearance of a complete set of organ-pipes. In other places the sides and roof look as if they had been carved by some sculptor of remarkable skill but erratic genius, and, as the visitor pro ceeds, this changes, and, on looking up, the place resembles an arched passage richly hung with drapery. The cave appears to be uniform in breadth, being no more than three or four feet wide all through, but irregular

A most bloody rencounter occurred in Memphis, Tenn., the other night, at a groon South-street, kept by a German ed Neutgals. A notorious character, John Magevney, entered the grocery, accompanied by three companions, Sim Maddox, J. Saul and Henry Postai, and called for whisky, which was dealt them by Neutgals. Upon the grocer demanding pay therefor, they manifested much indignation, and Magevney, their leader, drew a knife umping over the counter, stabbed Neutgals nine times, seven times in the breast and twice in the abdomen.

During the encounter, the German man-aged to tree himself from his assailant, and aged to tree nimself from the assailant, and seizing a pistol fired at Magevney. The ball missed its aim, but struck Maddox, who was standing near, in the neck. The German by this time had cleared the house, and, procuring a shot-gun, stepped outside.

In another collision which ensued, the rowdies attempted to wrest from Neutgals the weapon, whereupon it was accidentall discharged, the contents striking an Iris woman across the street, inflicting of a serious character. By this time Neut-gais and Maddox both lay stretched on the ground from loss of blood, and Magevney and the others, aware of the danger of longer re-maining in the vicinity, fled, and under cover of the darkness escened. cover of the darkness escaped.

MORRISSEY'S REASONS FOR BECOMING A PRIZE-FIGHTER .- A correspondent of the Petersburg (Va.) Express recently met Morrissey on a North River boat, and tells this story of the prize-fighter:

He (M.) said that he never would have b come the pugilist he has except in self-de-fense—that years ago he was in the habit of visiting New York City three or four times a year—and that invariably a crowd of rowlies set upon him and licked him unmerci-ulty. At last he determined to train himfully. At last he determines to these states self in the "manly art" for the purpose of deself in the "manly art" for the purpose of deself in the master so sen in the mining art for the purpose of de-fending himself. In due time his muscle so powerfully developed itself, that he was more than able to defend himself against all assaults, and finally he was induced to enter the prize-ring, with what success the world well knows. He now declares that it is not his intention ever to fight again—that he has a family now looking up to him, and for their sake he desires to be a good citizen; besides, he has secured quite a which renders him above the necessity of fighting for a living.

SILVER CHANGE BECOMING SCARCE.-It is stated that the revival of trade East is caus ing quite a scarcity of silver change. Some time ago it was a drug at a half to one per cent discount. Now, in New York, Ameri-can quarters are difficult to be had at par in exchange for gold. Dimes and half dimes are not to be got short of a premium, as the mint is not coining silver at present.

A CARDINAL'S PROVISION FOR ROBBERY.— A correspondent of the Manchester Guar-dian says that Cardinal Autonelli keep his valuable collection of ancient gems in a room as remote as possible from his own apartments, lest if he should be robbed, it might seem necessary to the robbers to cut his throat besides.
